Introductions

Presentation by Wayne Graham of UVA's Scholars' Lab

A new day and time for our call!

We'll focus most of this call on a presentation. Wayne Graham, Head of Research and Development at UVA's Scholars' Lab will discuss the approach they are taking in preserving, providing a discovery interface, and making scholarly use of their GIS datasets. For the past several years, they have been working with Open Source technologies to develop a GIS infrastructure for maintaining and enabling their collections through OGC-compliant web services. As part of their holistic approach, they have recently released Neatline, a plugin editor interface for developing rich, interpretive maps using the Omeka platform. He will discuss their overall strategy for working with GIS data, integrating maps in to interpretive frameworks, as well as his experience migrating data from different systems.

If time, we'll briefly discuss touch on discussions from the last call on the sustainability of the geopreservation.org site.
