

The University of Texas at Austin University of Texas Libraries

Liaison Librarian for Biosciences

This position is posted as an Assistant Librarian and Librarian, depending on qualifications

The University of Texas Libraries invites applications for the position of Liaison Librarian for Biosciences. This position will provide innovative services to faculty and students in the life sciences. They will serve as a key member of the STEM and Social Sciences Engagement Team within the Research Support and Digital Initiatives department of the Academic Engagement division, collaborating with colleagues to advance and transform our liaison program in response to new modes of scholarship, teaching and learning. Strong candidates will have an enthusiasm for Open Science and supporting the work of STEM scholars. They will be excellent presenters and teachers; and they will be self-starters who appreciate a varied and evolving work environment.

To receive full consideration, complete application materials, including 3 screening questions you'll receive after the initial submission, are due by the date of first review on June 14th, 2019.

Candidates may be hired with the Assistant Librarian or Librarian title, depending on qualifications. To review a complete listing of responsibilities, qualifications and salary information, and to apply, please visit the UT Austin Job Board.
